

Publication Numbers are Changing

Our Department has revised the numbering system for forms and publications. The goal is to make it easier for the public to find applications, brochures and other items.

The transition to this new system will continue for at least a year. To avoid confusion between the old and new numbering, order forms and publications using whatever number is actually printed on the item.

Our forms will now have the prefix "F" instead of "DPH", and our publications will start with "P" instead of "PPH". Some of the current numbers will remain, while others will change a little.

You can see how the system works by looking at the Department's website.

We will not be reprinting anything solely to update the numbering. Only when we print a new supply of a form or publication will we change the number to the new system.
